School Difficulties in Children and Adolescents: How Parents Can Help

Dan Weinstein, Psy.D.

The purpose of this presentation is to provide current, evidence-based information about anxiety disorders, clinical depression, AD/HD, and learning disabilities in children and adolescents. Dr. Weinstein will provide an overview of the most common conditions that can become roadblocks to a student's academic success. He will review signs, symptoms, and a number of other factors related to these conditions. Dr. Weinstein will provide tips for parents who have children or adolescents with suspected or diagnosed conditions that may cause academic impairment. He also will discuss the role of the school in supporting these students.

About Dr. Weinstein:

Dr. Weinstein helps parents better understand the struggles faced by their children, by providing evaluations, psychotherapy, and educational services. He enjoys assisting students in developing effective problem-solving skills, reducing emotional and behavioral problems, coping with stress, getting along better with others, and strengthening their family relationships.

Dr. Weinstein specializes in conducting AD/HD, learning disability, diagnostic, and substance abuse evaluations. He also specializes in adolescent and child emotional and behavioral problems, and provides family psychotherapy and individual psychotherapy with children, adolescents, and adults. He also offers presentation and consultation services to schools, organizations, and parent groups. He has published articles on childhood diagnosis of AD/HD and Posttraumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD).
